1. To be honest, I love the idea of having to participate in Service Learning. I feel that as a professor, making students volunteer and do something positive in the community is amazing. However, I do feel this is a bit unfair to those who do not have as much time on their hands. Many of us go to school and work full time, many have families and children, and simply cannot find time for these extra activities.
2. I have volunteered many times in the past. I feel that volunteering is extremely rewarding and almost gives you the motivation to want to do something for the community and make more positive impacts.
3. I honestly have no clue how this relates to this course. I am still trying to figure that out. If you can email your reasoning behind this amazing assignment, because I do see it as a positive, please reach out!

1. After volunteering and participating in this class's Service Learning assignment, I loved it. I think that volunteering and giving back to your community is something ever professor should encourage their students to do. Looking back, I remember one of the things that I wanted to start incorporating in my life was networking and getting to know different people. This assignment pushed me to do both those things and I hadn't realized until my third or fourth day volunteering.
2. The one thing I gained during this experience was that I certainly do want to work in a hospital. Working any other place would not fulfill my goals. However, it did show me how many innocent animals are in shelters and that people need to stop buying and start adopting.
3. Going back to my first question, I feel that this course helps you get out of their and get a taste of either the field you want to be in, or one you were interested in and now are sure you do not want to pursue. I feel this class had a lot to do with what we want to do career-wise, and this project helped me realize I do not want to work with animals.

My thoughts from this project is that I will learn more on how to use time wisely. I feel this project will give me a glimpse of the aspect of faith. My overall thoughts is that this project has been the most interesting assignment done in an English class. This service relates to English because we are using language and grammar to communicate with one another.

- 1) By participating in the Service Learning Project, I partook a unique route in my life. I volunteered for the First time at a political event at the state capitol. It was very informative and fun. Other volunteers and I were able to witness how a proposal was introduce to both the house and senate.
- 2) During this experience, I learned self confidence and time management. Also, I learned that people care for those who are going through obstacles.
- 3) The Service Learning relates to this course because oral communication is one of many principles in the English language. Also, writing and critical thinking was involved to finish the Service Learning Project.

1. Service Learning is extremely beneficial to ourselves as well as our community. I found volunteering in one of our local towns gave me some insight on our neighbors and discovered more opportunities for me to help any way I can. However, I do not agree that it should be a mandatory assignment. As beneficial as it is, time is of the essence and I think it should be an extra credit assignment.
2. I will gain better work ethic but also a cleaner, friendlier neighborhood. We can't solely depend on other to take care of our neighborhoods, it's a team thing and together we can make a better, safer place.
3. Learning service relates to this course because it helps build character and a better insight of our communities. English 101 has helped me branch out in my writing as well as in my community.

1. What are your thoughts on having to participate in Service Learning? Please explain why you are having these thoughts.

The idea of a service learning assignment is great. I have no problem with helping out expecting nothing in return. My only problem is finding the time to do it. I am a stay at home mom of three boys and a full-time student. Being in this position limits any free time I have without children, plus I do not have family in Arizona to help me. 10-hour requirement is manageable.

2. What do you think you will gain from this, if anything? Please explain your answer.

My service learning is the Avondale police department, and some hours may be spent at the Avondale library.

On T.V. all I watch is non-fiction police, crime, investigation, forensics, cold case, etc. shows.

This experience will give me a real glimpse into what I see on T.V. There are real people involved, with real families, and living a life with real uncertainty where a situation can turn in an instant. I will be able to feel the anxiety, fear, stress, sense of accomplishment, confidence, etc. of what each moment brings police staff. I will be more able to put myself in their shoes, and see how their acts of service effect the community where I live. I'm sure I will have a new-found respect for what they do.

3. How does Service Learning relate to this course? Please explain your rationale.

I wasn't really sure, though I can relate it to what we have been learning about recently if I think about it. The mid-term group project: Allowed students to work with each other for a shared grade. This means that everyone has to pull their own weight, and trust others to do their part. Everyone has to do their best, because their individual efforts will affect everyone in the group. This applied to service learning because working as a community requires communication, effort, a passion, sense of responsibility, and being on the same page getting to the same end result.

The argumentative/persuasive essay is trying to convince someone of something that I think would be in my best interest, solely based on facts, research, what society and media portrays it to be. It is not the same as experiencing it first hand to make a real solid opinion of it. That would be like basing the life of a police station staff to what I see on T.V. I will not know the behind the scenes, the face and life behind the badge and headset, unless I witness it for myself. This relates to service learning because having these new experiences opens our eyes to what really is, compared to what we thought it was. The same idea applies to a career path we think is going to be the best choice. Though if some had shadowed someone in that profession, they may either develop more of a passion or want to change their career path choice altogether.

Cause and effect allow us to see the steps that are required to reach our career goals. When working beside someone during service learning, we may see the passion or loath they have for their career. They may make it look easy or really challenging. Either way, the path getting to their goal meant sacrifice, obligations, overcoming obstacles, years of schooling, training, and experience. It may make you have much more admiration for someone and what they went through to get to where they are. It could even inspire someone and myself to change career choices, or feel even more determined to reach their goals.

1. What are your thoughts on having to participate in Service Learning? Please explain why you are having these thoughts.
I feel that it could be a good way to get information from the nurses and CRNS's that are currently on the floor assisting with cases. Learning things from them that they picked up along the way as well some of the procedures and things it would take for patient care inside the operating room.
2. What do you think you will gain from this, if anything? Please explain your answer.
Gaining an early insight into the nursing field as well as getting information from some CRNA's and Anesthesiologists.
3. How does Service Learning relate to this course? Please explain your rationale.

This course, I'm not sure other than for you to write about your experiences. If this was a CPD class I would better understand the reason behind it.

1. Now that you completed your Service Learning hours, what are your thoughts on having to participate in Service Learning? Please explain why you are having these thoughts.

I felt that this was a great way to get exposure into the field that you are in school for. I also feel that it gives you that small glimpse to let you see if this is really for you.

2. What did you gain from this experience, if anything? Please explain your answer.

Meeting new people and learning things that I've always wanted to know. Like what happens in the process with hospital surgery visits.

3. How does Service Learning relate to this course? Please explain your rationale.

It preps you for the field by allowing you to get some hands on experience and being able to write about your experience in clarity.

1. What are your thoughts on having to participate in Service Learning? Please explain why you are having these thoughts.

I really like the idea of gaining hands-on experience. So far I have not been very successful in locking down my volunteering times but I am confident it will work out.

2. What do you think you will gain from this, if anything? Please explain your answer.

I chose agencies that are related to my field of study which is in sustainability. Apart from giving back to the community, volunteering will help me network and learn from a different perspective and see what a career in sustainability can look like.

3. How does Service Learning relate to this course? Please explain your rationale.

In-person research will help me have a different, more in depth perspective in my writing.

1. I was happy to have to volunteer. I liked the experience and meeting people in my field of study.
2. I learned the importance of even the small task, for it all is necessary and important.
3. Service Learning served as research. It taught me the importance to language and knowing your subject. Those are two things I believe are important in the development of one's writing.
